

Dynamic Power Variations in Data Centers and Network Rooms

By Jim Spitaels

White Paper #43

Executive Summary

The power requirement required by data centers and network rooms varies on a minute by minute basis depending on the computational load. This magnitude of this variation has grown and continues to grow dramatically with the deployment of power management technologies in servers and communication equipment. This variation gives rise to new problems relating to availability and management.

